David Cherry

Artist Guest

David Cherry is a multiple award-winning professional artist, who is consistently ranked as one of the best fantasy and science fiction artists in the country. He has won multiple Chesley, Frank R. Paul, and Polly Freas awards, along with 10 nominations for Hugo Award's Best Professional Artist. In addition to many successful exhibitions, David has painted covers for over 30 paper back books, written short stories, and even has a series of trading cards featuring his work.

“The recognition I am most proud of is being asked to speak about my work to the Smithsonian Institution” said Mr. Cherry. “They felt my work was an important part of the industry, and wanted to find out more. I am talking to them about including some of my art in one of their exhibitions.”

In addition to final art on the boxes and in the game, Mr. Cherry will be the concept artist for future titles. “As Ensemble ventures into non-historical topics, David will be essential for creating the look, the architecture, and the characters that will inhabit these games.” said Mr. Goodman. “We want to really grab people’s imagination, and David has proven he can do that many times over. It’s an honor to have him working with us when creating these new worlds.”

Heather Alexander

Music Guest

Born in the San Francisco Bay Area, Heather Alexander was raised with the customs of the Isles firmly bred into her by her mother and grandmother, both natives of Britain. Her father, a full blooded Missourian and a prominent jazz vocalist/guitarist of the forties began Heather's musical education at the age of six when he started teaching her guitar. By age nine, she was teaching herself to play the violin. She later began composing songs and honed her skills with several years of private study in music, voice and drama. Heather has performed in a broad spectrum of contexts from opera to country music.

In 1985, she joined a country and western band as vocalist and lead fiddler, while at the same time finding her niche in Celtic music by playing fiddle for the Irish and Scots dancers at the Renaissance Pleasure Faire. Since that time, her original music has been heavily influenced by the traditions of her roots.

She and three other Faire musicians founded a group in 1987 to perform traditional Irish tunes and Heather's original music, in a semielectric context.

When the group split, she blended her love of Celtic music with her desire to play rock and roll, forming Phoenix, a Celtic Fusion band, performing original and traditional music with a solid rock and roll sound. They produced an album, Keepers of the Flame, which was released on Heather's own label, Sea Fire Productions early in 1990. Both the album and the band achieved a high degree of local popularity, and their fame began to spread. Sadly, in 1991, Phoenix broke up due to artistic differences.

Now, Heather performs solo at pubs, coffee houses and festivals from L.A. to Seattle, and with other groups throughout California and Nevada. She has worked with and opened for many notables, including the Bay Area's Tempest, Tommy Makem, the Clancy Brothers, Ed Miller, and Alex Becton.

She has performed on several albums, either as an instrumentalist, vocalist, composer or arranger. In 1985, she undertook a project with publisher Firebird Arts & Music to create albums based on fantasy novels and short stories. This relationship lasted, on and off, for nearly eight years. In 1994, Heather produced her first solo CD, Wanderlust, with backup from Rob Wullenjohn and Lief Sorbye of Tempest, and concert harpist Jenny Lindner. Released on her independent label, Sea Fire Productions, Wanderlust has been well received across the U.S.

John Hertz

Fan Guest

Born in Chicago in 1949, John was an SF reader from an early age but unaware of fandom. Instead, his energies went to such hobbies as magic, which he eventually taught at summer camp and performed on TV. He was also an early computer lover, writing software in machine language, which he says he's since forgotten. In 1969 the uniquely free-form program of study at Antioch College brought John to Los Angeles and a boarding house where he met Jack Harness. Jack recognized John as a profan and introduced him to APA-L, the LASFS and thence fandom at large. [Thanks, Jack!] John still resides in Los Angeles, where he works as a lawyer. He might disagree, but for many fans elsewhere, including me, he is one of the icons of LA fandom. He can usually be found at Worldeons, Westercons, Loseons and, happily for his eastern friends, Lunation. Though he looks great in the beautifully tailored Regency formal clothes he'll usually wear once during a con -- if you've never seen this, picture the man on the Johnnie Walker scotch label -- you're likelier to meet him in contemporary casuals and a prominent propeller beanie. It says something about John's view of fandom and his sense of humor about it that he's one of the few fans to have actualized this cartoon signifier. He wears it proudly.

John is rightfully proud of having introduced a new convention tradition to fandom, but perhaps deserves even more credit for the way he's done it. I admire the way he's kept Regency dancing connected to traditional fannishness. Dancing, an otherwise mundane activity, was granted fannish citizenship, much as Pogo was in the Fifties. It became another of our whimsical customs, like the propeller beanie, the customized nametag and the Great Wall dinner expedition, rather than a "special interest" whose devotees segregate themselves at cons.
